A SUMMER MORNING SCENE.

The mist of night have gently risen from the world, And morning once again her banner has unfurled. Creeping from the hills the glorious sun appears, And the dew upon the leaves sparkle like angels' tears. Birds begin to wake now and sing their songs once more, And in far off wonderland the lark begins to soar. The eastern hills are tipped in gold, and all the earth is green, And azure skies look down upon this lovely morning scene.

The flowers raise their drooping heads, responsive to the call, A smile of joy and welcome the morning gives to all, And sweetly smelling perfumes rise far above the trees, And are wafted over hill and dale upon the morning breeze. And, see, down yon mossy slope the glistening waters rush, And then by lower and arbor, through bramble and through bush, The silver streamlet winds its way, and water lilies smile, As if to call us from the world and rest with them awhile.

Oh, beautiful morning, calm and peace are written on thy brow, And nature pays her homage to thee with music low. She bids thee welcome with a song that rises on the air, And echoes take the praises up from woodland far and near, And we, who work and toil all day, and with our troubles cope, We gladly welcome thee, because thou bringest us sweet hope— Hope that the day will brighter be than the gloomy yesterday, And that the sun that shines for all will smile our tears away.

—Cork Examiner.

A HERO'S CHANCE.

"What's the use o' reading about all them hero fellers, anyhow? That's what I'd like to know. Calvin's jest gettin' head full o' crazy notions about such folks as Lo'd Nelson an' Wellington an' Putman an' Anthony Wayne an' George Washington an' a hull slew s'ot he can't think o' nothin' else. It'll only jest make him discontented, so't will!"

Farmer Biscomb did not often say so much at one time, but was generally quite concise and abrupt in his speech. There were very few subjects that he did not dismiss with a single sentence, but today he seemed to be unusually excited and actually spoke five sentences in succession.

"But he does like hist'ry," so pleaded the farmer's wife in her mild voice, "an' I think readin' about them brave men will help to make Calvin brave," argued the woman.

"That's all nonsense!" muttered the farmer scornfully. "It'll only make him unsatisfied. Next thing you know he'll want to go west an' fight the Indians. He's achin' now to be a hero, an' he'll get himself an' all the rest o' us in a terrible scrape some day, mind now if he do't!"

This was another overlong speech for the curt farmer.

"But I can't set here an' argy all day, I've got to get my plowing done," and he shuffled off of the old fashioned porch and followed the winding path out to the barn.

It was during the noon hour that this conversation between Farmer Biscomb and his wife took place. On his way to the barn he called to his son Calvin, a lad of 14, who was sitting in the shade of a cherry tree in the yard absorbed in Lossing's "Field Book of the Revolution."

"Come, Cal, shet up yer book right off. It's time to go to work," commanded the farmer.

The boy promptly closed the book and followed his father to the barn. "What ye been readin', Cal?"

"About Washington at Valley Forge. It's just as interesting as it can be, pa. What a brave hero Washington was!" replied Calvin, his face flushed with enthusiasm.

"And what good will it ever do you to read such stuff?"

"I want to know what people have done in the history of our country," replied Calvin.

"But you'll be a wantin' to be a hero, too, some o' these fine days," said the farmer doubtfully.

"Why, of course I want to be a hero now, pa!" cried Calvin, "but not in the way you think, I guess. Mr. Thompson, my schoolteacher, explained to us last winter that the use of history was to make us brave in our places just as those great heroes were brave in their places, not that we should go off somewhere on a hunt for adventure."

"Oh," drawled the farmer, a relief coming to his face. "He said that, did he, eh?"

"Yes, he told us that more than once."

"Waal, now, that's sound sense. Good for Thompson!" returned the brusque farmer. "Now bring the hoe and maddick, Calvin, and we'll hurry off to the field."

Mr. Biscomb could not complain that his son loitered at the farm work, even though his mind was full of the heroes of history. Indeed as he watched Calvin busily hoeing in the adjoining field all that bright spring afternoon he said to himself again and again, "Never seen a better boy to work in my life."

In the evening, however, as the family sat on the front porch, while the full moon rose over the eastern hills like a sphere of gold, Calvin described the fidelity of his favorite hero, George Washington, while pursuing his arduous work as a surveyor boy, never shirking his duty, never sighing for anything great or famous to do, and then a new light broke into Mr. Biscomb's mind, and he thought to himself: "Calvin's the most sensible boy I ever seen. I believe I'll get him some more o' them history books."

A few days later, as they were working side by side in the cornfield, Calvin said to his father:

"Pa, do you know why George Washington was such a grand hero?"

"Nuth, I can't answer that. I never had no schoolin', as you've had."

"It was because he was brave and always kept his mind about him," explained the lad.

"Good for you, Cal," replied the boy's father. "You've got the right idea about George—you have, sure. That's good stuff to make heroes out of—be brave an' keep a cool head. Ha, ha!"

"I am going to remember it too."

"Do."

Of course at that time Cal had not the remotest idea that a crisis would ever come in his life when he would have a chance to act on the principles he had discovered in his favorite hero. But such a test did come, and it came in a most unexpected way.

Almost six months had passed, and it was a beautiful day late in September. Calvin and his little brother Clay had been sent by their father on an errand to a neighbor's house about three miles from home. On their return early in the afternoon they had to pass through a large tract of woods, along a lonely, unfrequented road, but they tramped gayly on without the least thought of being afraid, listening to the occasional call of a cuckoo in the tall trees or the loud cackle of the crested chickadees. Now and then a gray squirrel would scamper up the trunk of a tree to a limb, where it would sit and scold the youthful intruders on its quiet domain.

"There's some one coming back there down the road," said Charley, chancing to look behind.

Calvin turned and saw a man driving toward them in a carriage. The horse was a fine, spirited animal, which stepped proudly along with arched neck and alertness. When the stranger overtook the two young pedestrians he stopped his horse, saying:

"My lads, I'm going your way some distance. Would you care to ride?"

Under ordinary circumstances Calvin would have jumped at the chance to ride behind a horse like the one before him, but on looking up at the man's face he was struck with its evil expression, in spite of the owner's effort at friendliness. Instinctively the boy felt that the stranger could not be trusted. So he replied as politely as possible:

"No, thank you, we're not tired, and would just as soon walk."

"Just as soon walk!" exclaimed the man, "in apparent surprise. 'Why, boys are generally very fond of riding. Come along, my lads, I want to show you what a fine stepper my horse is. I'll wager you never saw an animal that could move off so beautifully. Here, jump up; there's plenty of room for three of us on the seat.'"

"No," replied Calvin firmly, "I'd rather walk. My brother and I are watching the squirrels and birds as we go along."

"Well, maybe the little fellow would like to ride with me, then," the man said. "If you live in this direction, I can probably take him all the way home. Come, sonny," he said to Clay, with a smile.

Clay looked at Calvin, who whispered:

"Don't do it, Clay; there's something wrong, or he wouldn't coax us so."

"Thank you, mister," replied Clay, who had unbounded confidence in Calvin's judgment, "but I'd rather walk with my brother."

"You would, eh?" the man jeered, and in a moment his whole bearing changed, while his face became as cruel as a tiger's. "Well, we'll see about it."

Then, to the consternation of the boys, he dropped the lines upon the dashboard, sprang from the carriage, seized Clay roughly, gagged and bound him and lifted him to the buggy seat. Of course the little fellow struggled fiercely, and it took the man some time to secure him.

Meanwhile Calvin was not idle. Frightened as he was, the thought of his favorite hero's bravery flashed through his mind, and kept him from running away and leaving his little brother in the hands of the kidnaper, for such the man evidently was.

Calvin also remembered how to "keep a cool head."

Instead, therefore, of going into a panic he controlled himself and tried to think of some plan to frustrate the design of the child stealer. An idea came like an inspiration, and he acted at once. While the man was struggling with Clay Calvin ran to the side of the horse and slipped off one of the traces from the end of the whiffletree and then scurried around to the other side and jerked off the other.

The kidnaper had been too much absorbed in capturing Clay to notice what Calvin was doing. By the time the little fellow had been securely bound Calvin ran up to the side of the carriage and began to beg pitifully:

"Take me, too, mister. I don't want to be separated from my little brother. I won't make any noise or give you any trouble if you'll only take me with him."

"Well, scramble up, then, you young rascal!" commanded the man. "I'll get a larger reward for two kids than for one," he added, under his breath. "But mind, boy, if you give any alarm, I'll—and he glared savagely at Calvin."

The next moment Calvin had climbed up to the seat. Then the man took up the lines and called, "Get up!" to his horse, whereupon the animal sprang clean out of the shafts, which fell with a clatter to the ground.

"How did those traces become unhooked?" growled the man, with an oath.

He jumped out quickly, backed the horse into the shafts and proceeded nervously to fasten the traces. In his excitement he let the lines drop upon the crossbrace of the shafts in the rear of the horse.

Calvin watched the man breathlessly, and the instant the second trace was in place he seized the whip and brought it down upon the horse's flanks with a force that caused the spirited animal to make a tremendous bound ahead. The man tried to grasp the lines, but the front wheel struck him squarely on the hip and sent him sprawling to the ground, while the carriage spun over him and away down the road at a frightful pace.

There was one thing more for Calvin to do that required the presence of mind of a genuine hero, and that was to get possession of the lines. Perilous as the feat was, with the horse at a wild gallop, he accomplished it after several efforts, and then began the task of curbing the frightened animal. In this he did not succeed until his horse was able to keep the team in the road and thus prevent disaster.

Of course there was great astonishment when the boys came dashing up the lane with a strange horse and carriage and especially when the farmer and his wife hurried down to the gate and found Clay bound and gagged in the buggy. The plucky lads were soon taken into the house, where, after they told their story, not, however, without frequent exclamations of dismay from their parents.

"And, pa, it was because I remembered what you said about George Washington's keeping a cool head that I was able to get the better of the kidnaper," cried Calvin joyfully as he concluded his narrative.

"My boy, my brave boy!" exclaimed Farmer Biscomb, taking Calvin in his arms and giving him a strong hug, while the tears ran down his cheeks. "If that's the way it works, I'm going to give you all the hist'ries o' heroes you want. But, Cal, you are the greatest hero in the hull lot, George Washington an' all."

It cannot be denied that Calvin felt quite proud when he heard his father's words of praise.

"But, pa," he said presently, "aren't we going to try to find the kidnaper and have him arrested. I think we ought to, or he'll be stealing some other boys."

"Waal, you're right, Cal," agreed the farmer. "Sposen I take the rascal's horse and buggy an' drive to town an' report to the sheriff. We order find who's owner o' the team anyway—prob'ly he kidnapped that too."

"Let me go along with you, pa," begged Calvin.

"All right, come on."

The swift horse took them quickly into town, and then they soon found that the horse and carriage belonged to a liverman, who was greatly surprised to see Mr. Biscomb and Calvin bringing them home, and still more astonished when he learned that his best team had been hired by such a scoundrel as the would be kidnaper.

Then Mr. Biscomb hurried to the sheriff's office and told his story, Calvin adding a graphic touch here and there. A few minutes later the sheriff and a posse of officers were galloping toward the scene of Calvin's adventure. Arriving there, they tracked the kidnaper into the woods, and after an hour's search a squad of officers espied a man lying flat on the ground in a small thicket. When he saw that he was discovered, he sprang to his feet and tried to escape, but he was lame and could barely hobble along. They soon caught him and took him to the station house in the town to be identified.

As soon as Calvin saw the man he cried out:

"That's the man; that's the man!"

"Was he lame when you saw him?" questioned the sheriff.

"No, but the carriage wheel struck him and knocked him down," replied Calvin, "and I guess that's what made him lame. See if it isn't so."

Such proved to be the case. A large bruise on the man's hip showed where the carriage wheel had struck him, laming him so severely that he hadn't been able to limp far from the scene of his attempted crime.

"Well, you're a plucky one," said the sheriff, looking admiringly at Calvin's flushed face.

"He's a hero in truth," put in Lawyer Bates, who was standing by.

The end of it was that the kidnaper was convicted and properly punished—and Calvin shortly after received a fresh supply of "hero books."—Atlanta Constitution.

THOSE PETITIONS.

THERE are two petitions being circulated in this valley relating to the promised donation of $1,000 by the Supervisors to assist Sonoma county's exhibit at the Midwinter Fair. One of these petitions is for and the other against the appropriation.

The petition in favor of the proposition is being signed by the enterprising, successful, progressive, public-spirited and wide-awake people of Sonoma Valley who are striving for the general good to keep up with the times.

The petition against the appropriation will represent for the most part the non-progressive element in our midst.

There has always been and there always will be people in every community who are forever trying to pull down instead of building up. Of these Sonoma possesses more than its share. These are like the dog in the manger. They don't want anything themselves. Neither do they want anybody else to have anything, unless it be a mortgage on their farm or home. It is characteristic of the Sonoma Valley pull-back that when any legitimate public enterprise is projected or any honest proposition is advanced looking to the betterment of the condition of our people and things in general he grows sour and suspicious and at once proceeds to cry down the proposition on general principles.

The people of Sonoma Valley have already through the medium of a public meeting instructed its Supervisor to vote for the appropriation. At that meeting, which was free and open to every one, not a voice was raised in opposition to the proposition. On the contrary, every man present expressed himself in favor of the appropriation. In addition to this expression of public opinion over $500 has been subscribed by the people of Sonoma Valley toward the exhibit. This ought to be sufficient guarantee on the part of the people of Sonoma Valley that they favor the appropriation of the sum asked for and which has been promised by the Supervisors. This being so, we cannot see how a few can thwart the wishes of the many.

McNULTY is to have his neck broken at last. Governor Markham has refused to commute his sentence to imprisonment for life, and now, after being tortured in an inhuman manner for six years, he is to be put to death. Nine of the jurors who convicted him, two United States Senators and eight thousand people asked for a commutation of sentence to imprisonment for life. These people did not believe he deserved hanging. Governor Markham thought otherwise. Hence McNulty will be the principal actor in the hanging matinee at the Broadway street Jail in San Francisco next Friday.

THE pursuit of Chris. Evans has been abandoned by Sheriff Scott of Fresno county. The whereabouts of the bandit are unknown, but in all probability he is taking things easy among the mountaineers of Fresno county.

GOVERNOR MARKHAM issued a proclamation Tuesday designating January 27th as a public holiday, in honor of the Midwinter Fair opening exercises.

THE Six Companies have got out a circular advising those Chinese laborers who want to remain in this country to register, and those who want to leave to endeavor to get a free pass by refusing to register.

School Fund Apportionment.

Following is the apportionment of funds from the State School Fund for the schools of the county: All schools having 20 to 70 pupils, $265; less than 20 pupils, $215; Alder Glen, $90; American Valley, $247; Laguna Joint, $160; Summit Joint, $180; Bloomfield, $305; Cinnabar, $580; Cloverdale, $1325; Courthouse, $5320; Eagle, $285; Healdsburg, $2650; Lewis, $545; Meeker, $365; Miriam, $795; Petaluma, $4,240; Piner, $405; Potter, $580; Redwood, $530; Kincon, $580; Sonoma, $1,060; Vine Hill, $425; Wilson, $590; Windsor, $530. Total, $49,657.

A Pure Baking Powder.

A baking powder that can be depended upon to be free from lime and alum is a desideratum in these days of adulterated food. So far as can be judged from the official reports, the "Royal" seems to be the only one yet found by chemical analyses to be entirely without one or the other of these substances, and absolutely pure. This, it is shown, results from the exclusive use by its manufacturers of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent processes which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder except the "Royal," the manufacturers of which control the patents under which it is refined.

Dr. Edward G. Love, formerly analytical chemist for the United States Government, who made the analyses for the New York State Board of Health in their investigation of baking powders, and whose intimate knowledge of the ingredients of all those sold in this market enables him to speak authoritatively of the purity, wholesomeness and superior quality of the "Royal."

"I find the Royal Baking Powder composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substance."

Prof. Love's tests, and the recent official tests by both the United States and Canadian Governments, show the Royal Baking Powder to be superior to all others in strength and leavening power. It is not only the most economical in use, but makes the purest, finest flavored and most wholesome food.

The success of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in effecting a speedy cure for colds, croup and whooping cough has brought it into great demand. Messrs. Pontius & Son, of Cameron, Ohio, say that it has gained a reputation second to none in that vicinity. Jas. M. Queen, of Johnston, W. Va., says it is the best he ever used. B. F. Jones, druggist, Winona, Miss., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is perfectly reliable. I have always warranted it and it never failed to give the most perfect satisfaction." 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

Unrecorded Mortgage.

The Supreme Court has lately decided an appeal case from this county involving a question of general interest. One Pierce & Bill gave the Bank of Ukiah a note for some $10,000 and a mortgage upon his lands for security. The bank held his mortgage but did not record it. Asbill afterward borrowed from the Petaluma Savings Bank about $1,000 upon his note and failing to pay the same that bank sued him and levied an attachment upon the land covered by the mortgage. The question presented upon the trial was: Will the lien of an unrecorded mortgage given to secure a loan take precedence over an attachment lien obtained after the execution of the mortgage? Judge Dougherty held that the law only protects purchasers and mortgagees who buy or loan in good faith without notice of the unrecorded mortgage. The Court affirms the case. —Democrat.

SUNSTROKE IN BATTLE!
DR. MILES' MEDICAL CO., FLEMING, IOWA—1 must say the Restorative Nerve and Liver Pills have done me great good.

FOUR YEARS I HAVE NOT FELT AS WELL AS NOW.
The starting point of my disease was a sunstroke received in battle before Fort Hudson, Louisiana, June 11th, 1862. Up to the time of beginning to take Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve and Liver Pills I had had a continual distressing pain in my head; also, weak shells, and the most fearful nervous character, and stay in the house for a long time. I KNOW YOUR REMEDIES HAVE CURED ME, and that the cure will be permanent. Several of my friends, who were cured, and all speak well of them. Yours truly, COL. C. W. DEAN.

Visitors to Sonoma on business or pleasure will find the Sonoma House as conducted by Harry Fisher the hotel of Sonoma.

The meals to be had at the Sonoma House, now kept by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fisher, are the best to be had in any hotel north of San Francisco.

J. Gundlach & Co. and Kohler & Frohling, whose wineries are located in this valley, have each subscribed $50 toward Sonoma's exhibit at the Midwinter Fair.

The Union Hotel bar, under the supervision of A. A. Enke, will be supplied with the very best of wines, whiskeys and cigars to be had in the market.

The contract for plowing and harrowing the Plaza has been let to Louis Breitenbach for $29.65. The other bids were as follows: Thos. Ellis, $40; Peter Keil, $30.

J. D. Barnett of Santa Rosa and J. T. Peters and Mr. Carlton of San Francisco, appraisers of the estate of the late Wm. H. Graves, were in town last Friday appraising the property belonging to the estate in this place.

The Union Hotel dining rooms, since the recent change of proprietorship, have undergone a change for the better. Under the supervision of Mrs. S. E. Jones the tables are all that could be desired by the most fastidious epicure.

T. A. Close, who has charge of the Sonoma county exhibit at the Midwinter Fair, was in town last Tuesday. He states that the $4,000 to be raised by subscription to secure the $1,000 promised by the Supervisors will be collected before the 1st of next month.

Mrs. Foley, the aged mother of Mrs. F. Grothaus, died in this place last Wednesday evening after a lingering illness. The old lady had reached the ripe old age of eighty years. The remains were taken to San Francisco, where her son resides, for interment.

The valuable lace handkerchief which was lost by a lady in Glen Ellen at the Carnival in this place over a month ago has been restored to the owner by the finder. This shows the value of advertising in the INDEX-TRIBUNE. The handkerchief was valued at $50. The adv. cost $1.50.

The Supervisors at their recent meeting refused to donate the promised $1,000 in aid of the Midwinter Fair Fund on the grounds that the required $4,000 has not as yet been raised by subscription. It is thought the required amount will be forthcoming by February 1st, in which event the appropriation will be made.

Invitations are out for a social hop and supper to be given by the new owners of the Union Hotel, Mr. A. A. Enke and his sister Mrs. A. E. Jones. The party will take place at Union Hall on Friday evening, January 26th. Music will be furnished by Park's orchestra. The party promises to be the social event of the season.

For pains in the chest there is nothing better than a flannel cloth saturated with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. If used in time it will prevent pneumonia. 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

THE STORM.

Sonoma Creek Runs Bank Full—Cattle and Fences Go Down Stream.

Row Boats and Gum Boots in Demand at Embarcadero.

The storm of the past week has been the heaviest of the season. The downpour on Sunday night was tremendous. Sonoma creek inside of six hours was converted from a small brook stream into a raging torrent and broke over its banks in many places.

Fences and cattle were washed down stream, and it seemed for a time that the iron bridges at Agua Caliente and Madrone and the wooden bridge at the Agnew crossing on Sonoma Creek would be carried away. The sudden subsidence of the waters on Monday morning, however, saved the three structures, although all were more or less damaged.

At the foot of Broadway avenue, two miles south of town, where the angle of the creek is at its sharpest curve the creek cut into and washed away several feet of that thoroughfare.

On Sunday night the creek raised over twenty feet and was higher than has ever been known.

Embarcadero, located at the mouth of Sonoma Creek, was submerged and the surrounding country was one vast sea of water on Monday morning. Rowboats and gum boots were in great demand down that way as it was impossible to navigate without them. The county bridge which crosses Sonoma Creek at that point was raised four and one half feet last summer and that was all that saved it from being carried away by the flood.

The damage so far reported has been slight and consists principally of loss of fencing and stock.

DEATH OF ANTON KISER.

One by One the Old-Timers are Passing Away.

Anton Kiser, the well-known Swiss dairyman of this valley, died at his home at Embarcadero on Friday night of last week at 10:30 o'clock after an illness of less than a week. The disease that caused his death was rheumatism of the heart.

The deceased located in this valley over twenty-five years ago and engaged in the dairy business. Shortly after coming here he married and at the time of his death left a widow and four children. He was a generous-hearted man and the hospitality dispensed at the Kiser farm was known to everybody for miles around and made him hosts of friends.

The funeral took place Sunday in a heavy rain storm, but for all that it was one of the largest that has taken place in Sonoma for a long time. The remains were laid to rest in the Catholic Cemetery. The funeral services in St. Francis' Church which were conducted by Rev. Father Whyte were both sad and impressive.

The deceased was a member of Pueblo Lodge, No. 168, A. O. U. W., and had his life insured in the order for $2,000. He was a native of Switzerland and forty-four years of age.

SONOMA BONDED WAREHOUSE

Geo. W. Sparks to be the New Keeper.

Waverly Stairly, the newly-appointed Collector of Internal Revenue of the Fourth District, will shortly assume the duties of the office. He will make a complete change in the personal service and the fat places now held by Republican will be given to Democrats in conformity with that time-honored Democratic doctrine "to the victors belong the spoils." The position at the present time so ably filled by Billy Thomas as keeper of the Sonoma bonded warehouse will be given to G. W. Sparks, an old and well-known citizen of this place who has "whooped 'em up" for the straight Democratic ticket for many years. The position will be worthily bestowed as there is no Democrat in Sonoma Valley, if we except Hon. Robt. Howe, who has devoted so much time and money to the local Democratic cause as he has.

Illegal Fishing.

The first conviction under the new ordinance recently passed by the Board of Supervisors to prevent illegal fishing in Russian River was held in Justice Brown's Court, Santa Rosa, the other day. J. Silva, charged with fishing with seines at the mouth of that stream, was found guilty and fined $75 by his honor.

The Sonoma House, Harry Fisher proprietor, is a popular resort for commercial travelers.

FATAL PLUNGE.

Seven Men Hurlled to their Death at Austin Creek.

A terrible railway accident occurred on the North Pacific Coast Railroad last Sunday night on Austin Creek between Cazadero and Duncan's Mills in this county, whereby seven men lost their lives.

About 7 o'clock on the night in question conductor Brown, accompanied by engineer Briggs, fireman Collister, railroad agent Sabine, engine-wiper Rice, Postmaster Thos. Gould, Frank Hart and Wm. Bremer, left Cazadero on an engine to inspect the bridge across Austin Creek, which was considered to be in danger of being washed away, as the stream had become greatly swollen by the rain which had fallen on Saturday and Sunday.

Arriving at the bridge the engine came to a standstill and conductor Brown went ahead to investigate. He gave orders for the engineer to remain where he was unless he signalled him to cross. The conductor passed over the bridge in safety and proceeded down the road to inspect another bridge.

During his absence the engineer and the six men with him became impatient at the absence of the conductor and started to cross the bridge in the engine and cab. They had no sooner reached the center of the structure than it gave way and the engine and its living freight of seven men plunged headlong into the seething, raging waters below.

One long, despairing cry from the doomed men reached the ears of conductor Brown, who was approaching the fatal bridge from the other side. Then the waters closed over its victims as they took their fearful plunge into eternity, and all was quiet save the rushing of the mad, cruel torrent below and the raging of the storm fiend above.

The next morning conductor Brown, who had fled from the dreadful scene and had been wandering in the hills all night half-crazed over the fearful catastrophe, managed to collect his scattered senses together and made his way to Duncan's Mills and reported the disaster.

The bodies of five of the victims have been recovered.

GLEN ELLEN PARK.

It Will be Improved by the S. F. & N. P. Railway Company.

Glen Ellen Park, which is one of the most attractive picnic grounds in the State, is to be greatly improved by the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway Company, which will run a large number of picnic trains the coming season to those popular outing grounds.

The park, which will be under the supervision of the railroad people, will be managed by Messrs. Charles Troll and Stephen Elliott of San Francisco.

The railroad company has accepted their bond and engagements can now be filled by societies. According to R. X. Ryan, General Passenger Agent of the road, the park will be conducted by reliable persons and the best of order will be maintained. The park is now ranked as one of the most attractive grounds in the State and for social gatherings and picnics it is unsurpassed. The grounds are covered with fine shade trees and the dance pavilion is one of the best in the State. From other sources it is learned that Messrs. Troll and Elliott contemplate constructing a race track. This will be an additional feature. A fine stream runs through the grounds, and in fact Glen Ellen will be made an attractive place.

According to the terms of the contract no gambling of any kind will be permitted on the grounds, and Mr. Ryan says that the company will at all times enforce the "no gambling" clause. "Persons go to the country for pleasure," said he, "and not to gamble. If chance games are permitted to run it would be only a question of a short time when rows would result, and the pleasure of decent people spoiled. Glen Ellen Park is in good hands, and a large number of picnics have already been booked."

Where art Thou, Bill?

County Clerk Wines has received a communication from the Morse Detective Agency of San Francisco inquiring for a man named Wm. Crowley. The communication sets forth that there is a large sum of money waiting for him; that he was last seen in San Francisco in 1892, and is supposed to be living in this part of the State. If he is dead information is wanted concerning his heirs.

The Department of Agriculture is about to introduce to us a new root vegetable, the tuber of the calla lily. Farmers in Florida have begun to raise the tubers for market. The plant grows readily in swamps and so thickly that the yield of a single flooded acre is enormous. In cooking it must be first boiled, after which it can be fried, roasted, baked, etc., according to taste.

GLEN ELLEN.

The Crowley-Crofoot Nuptials—Minor Notes.

About ten inches of rain fell here the past week.

The county road near the farm of Wm. H. Hilton was considerably damaged during the late rains.

Owing to a washout on the Southern Pacific road the train was considerably delayed last Tuesday.

Mrs. C. H. Brunning and child returned home last Monday after an absence of several weeks in San Francisco.

John T. Peters of San Francisco and D. H. Twing of Sonoma, real estate men, were among Monday's visitors in this place.

The waters of Sonoma Creek at this place were higher during the late rains than have ever been known by the oldest residents.

The domicile of Dr. O'Donnell's bear was washed away during the late storm and ruin took to a tree. He was with some difficulty brought down and housed again.

Mr. John Crowley and Mrs. Annie Crofoot of this place were united in the holy bonds of matrimony in St. Francis' Church at Sonoma last Sunday. After a brief honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Crowley returned to their home in this place. The many friends of the newly-wedded couple were not idle during this time, but prepared a rousing welcome in the way of an old-time serenade, which will undoubtedly long linger in their memories. May their future be bright and happy is the wish of their many friends.

Dr. E. D. Fitz-Gerald and J. J. Musgrave of Folkestone, England, are the guests of Capt. and Mrs. H. E. Boyes. It is the intention of the gentlemen to locate in California and possibly in Sonoma Valley.

Fresh water should be given to cut flowers daily, not merely to keep them fresh as long as possible, but because the water in which they stand becomes tainted and fills the atmosphere with disease germs. Negligence in this matter is really criminal.

An old farmer, says an exchange, intent on making his will, was asked by a lawyer the name of his wife, when he gravely replied: "Well, indeed, I really don't recollect what it is. We've been married for upward of 40 years, and I've always called her my old woman." The lawyer left a blank to be filled up when his old woman's name was ascertained.

The emu eggs which have been placed in the Petaluma incubator at the Midwinter Fair were secured by Mr. Byce after being laid by an emu at Golden Gate Park. The eggs are very large and are of a beautiful green color, and the experiment of hatching them by artificial means has never before been tried. When these machines have hatched all kinds of eggs, including the ostrich, there can be no doubt about incubating the emu eggs.

Thomas C. Collister, the young man who was drowned while firing on the engine that went into Austin Creek in the recent terrible accident, was making what he expected would be his last trip over the road when he went down in the stream. His father lives at Occidental and had made arrangements with his son to quit the railroad that day and engage in business with him. He had one day to serve and that was the day on which the awful accident occurred. The trip he made was not only his last on the road but the last on earth.

Capt. Jack Stofen, for many years a resident of this valley and brother of County Treasurer Stofen, will celebrate to-day in San Francisco, his present home, his eleven years service on the Government steamer Gen. McDowell. The San Francisco Bulletin, in making mention of the above, remarks that since assuming charge of the steamer Captain Stofen has been unusually successful, and under his able management the service has not alone been benefited, but every person who travels feels exceptionally kind toward the commanding officer. His courteous manners have won him hosts of friends, and it is their wish that his future success will be as great as it has been during his eleven years of faithful service.

Watercress contains much sulphur and is an excellent tonic for the complexion and hair. Eat it plain or with salad dressing.

Much trouble with the teeth and consequent suffering could be avoided if habits of perfect cleanliness be insisted upon with children. If the teeth are kept absolutely clean decay will not start. Children should be early taught to give this care.

Johnny Crow, the boy hero of Carson, who saved seven children from being drowned last Monday and who swam forty feet under ice with the last one, is having a purse made up for him by the citizens of Carson.

J. T. Baldwin of Petaluma came very near losing his life last Monday morning while attempting to ford a creek east of that town. He was driving a horse attached to a cart and when about in the middle of the stream the cart was upset by the rushing torrent, causing the horse to fall and throwing Mr. Baldwin underneath the vehicle. After a desperate struggle he extricated himself, and help soon arrived and the horse was rescued. At this point of the creek the water is very deep and Mr. Baldwin is to be congratulated on his narrow escape.

Thirty-six prisoners now occupy quarters in the County Jail.

Preston Smith is visiting his sister Mrs. G. H. Hotz of this place.

A barber was voted the most popular man in Topeka, Kansas, in a recent ballot to settle that honor. He is deaf and dumb.

As a food for hogs, milch cows or horses, there is nothing better in proportion to cost than pumpkins. Now is the time to use them.

The sum of $50 has been appropriated by the Sonoma County Pomona Grange for the Sonoma county exhibit at the Midwinter Fair.

Some women are awfully touchy. A widow has brought an action against a newspaper which said that her husband had gone to a happier home.

A Parisian novelty for the neck is an immense bow of sash-wide black morie ribbon with long ends trimmed with two founces of twelve inch white lace.

Skirts are full, but fit the figure trimly in front and at the sides, the fullness being massed behind where it is laid in box-plaits at the waist and hangs in organ pipe plaits. These are held in place by tapes or steels inside.
